in Imitating Fire Eater.

New York, Sept. II.—In an effort to emulate a "fire cater" Henry Force, who lives in Union Hill, N. J., was terribly burned. He saw a "fire eater" perform in a side show at a circus recently, and conceived the idea of becoming a "fire eater" himself. Not having any alcohol, he thought kerosene would do as well, so he got some from his mother. Then he went out in front of the house, and, taking a big mouthful of the liquid, lighted a match and set fire to the kerosene.

A moment later his shricks brought his mother to his assistance and he was taken into the house and medical assistance summoned. The boy's lips, tongue and the inside of his mouth were horribly burned and it is feared he inhaled the flames.

Aged Woman's Fatal Attempt to

"Break It In."

New York, Sept. 14.—At the age of 70 years, Mrs. Bridget Mooney died in St. Francis's Hospital from cellulitis, caused by the wearing of tight shoes.

Mrs. Mooney got a new pair of shoes a few weeks ago. They hurt her feet, but she thought she could "break them in" in a day or two, and she persisted in wearing them. The left shoe pinched her big toe and finally tore the skin. The abrasion became inflamed, and she had to go to the hospital.

The surgeons discovered that cellulitis had set in from the abrasion having become poisoned in some way, and the age of the women being against her, they could not prevent her death.

GIVES FUNSTON MUCH PRAISE.

ing, and Describes Some Difficulties-High Estimate of Filipino Women.

REPUBLIC SPECTAL New York, Sept. 14.—General Arthur Mac-Arthur, former Military Governor of the Philippines, whose recent report to the War Department was a matter of much differing comment, stands firmly by that report, and repeats his belief that the Filipinos will eventually become valuable and valued eventually become valuable and valued friends of the United States Government. A Republic correspondent had the pleasure of spending an hour with General MacAr-thur this week, and in that time the Gen-eral gave much light on the importance of the capture of Aguinaldo, and the credit that is due to General Funston.

General MacArthur is a diplomat. The gift of reasonableness is his. He has, be-yong the harmonic poise that is acquired in the service, the instincts of a gentleman.

A first impression of the General is his.

A first impression of the General is his amiability; then he becomes crisp, direct, clear and penetrating in his observations, in which crops out an iron force of firmnes which crops out an iron force of firmness almost severe when one considers his strong, square jaw and his set lips, but there is always a kindliness in his eyes that would never betray, but never forgive a betrayal. Add to this a quiet voice, clean-tut features, a guick, short step, a well-knit, well-poised physique, and you have General MacArthur.

The capture of Aguinaldo was the intrin de event of General MacArthur's command in the archibelago. Whatever question may still linger in the air unspoken concerning the details of that expedition in charge of General Funston, there is no doubt that still linger in the air unspoken concerning the details of that expedition in charge of General Funston, there is no doubt that Major General MacArthur will stand personally responsible for every bit of it. In his annual report to the department, written in Manila, General MacArthur expressed his views on the Aguinaldo matter very clearly, and his impressions on the subject have not changed.

"I have answered all questions about that matter in my report to Washington," said the General, and this is what he wrote:

"In consideration of important immediate results and in the light of remote consequences likely to arise therefrom, the capture of General Aguinaldo may be regarded as the most momentous single event of the year. As a military transaction it was unique, isolated and complete in itself. In the first place it absolutely dispelled the growing tendency to idealize his personality and to surround him with mythical legends of invincibility, which millions of natives believed to be true, and which they also believed would ultimately insure the success of the rebellion. With a people so sensitive, impulsive, generous and imaginative as the Filipinos the mechanics of sentiment, when well appreciated and rightly applied, afford many powerful instruments of military and political control."

In February information reached headquarters at Manila that positively located Aguinaldo's camp. On this score General MacArthur said further in his report:

"The report upon which this belief was based was transmitted by General Funston, through General Wheaton, and the necessary continuity of action indicated that these distinguished officers should control all subsequent arrangements. All the responsibility as to the methods employed must fail upon these headquarters, as the plan, which was evolved by the two Generals, was submitted to and approved by the division commander, who simply added thereto emphatic injunctions to the effect that Aguinaldo must be taken alive and delivered safely into his hands at the palace of Ma breach of confidence to state that General Funston is not regarded in the army as a swashbuckling soldier or a wildly adventurous one. He is a university man, whose record has been clear of entanglements. He was probably selected to command the expedition because the discovery of the exact location of Aguinaldo's camp occurred through a letter written by Aguinaldo to one of his officers, which revealed the information required. This letter was intercepted by one of Funston's Lleujenants, and reached headquarters in due course of military routine. In his report General MacArthur said:

"All the personal distinction which

"All the personal distinction which materally attaches to successful executions must go to General Funston, who on this, as on former occasions, displayed so much fortitude, determination, good judgment, self-contidence and self-control as to justify the expectation that his future carreer is conducting operations on a larger scale will be streaded with like successful resultended with like successful

"Do they take kindly to the form of American government?"

"My position, commanding an occupying army, was not the most auspicious to observe the social side of the Filipinos. We naturally regarded them at first with suspicion. We were always on the alert for surprises.

"But there are all classes in Manila, as there are elsewhere. The cosmopolitan Filipino, who has traveled, and quite understands the social relations of the American form of government, is as clever, polished, intelligent and courteous an individual as one can meet anywhere. I gave one or two functions while I was there, at which over a thousand Filipinos were present, and the occasions were quite equal in manner and dignity to a reception at the White House. There are the very rich and the very poor, and they differ according to the material conditions that surorund them.

mercial prospects of the Philippine Islands for the United States market?"

The General hesitated a minute, and finally referred to that portion of his report bearing upon that question, as he had therein answered the matter more thoroughly than he could at random.

"As a matter of fact, having reference to the present and immediate future, it is not apparent how political control of the archipelago is to bring suiden and large additions to the national wealth of the United States," says General MacArthur.

"Looking to the future, however, with relation to ultimate effects, this is, perhaps, the most fortunate circumstance connected with American occupation, as it may afford favorable conditions for the solution of the main Philippine problem, which in its pres-
